

Jordan Reyes

jordan@example.com | LinkedIn | (510) 555-0143 | Oakland, CA

11 years in marketing, the last four at the seam between product and go-to-market at a Series C fintech. I write positioning sales actually uses, run launches that ship when the roadmap says they will, and read win/loss notes the way other people read fiction.

EXPERIENCE

Senior Marketing Manager | Brightline Pay | Feb 2022 - Jan 2026

Series C fintech - payments platform for mid-market finance teams | San Francisco, CA

Owned positioning, launches, and lifecycle for the SMB product line. Managed a team of four. Role eliminated in the January 2026 restructure that cut 40% of go-to-market.

- Repositioned the SMB product from “payments API” to “the finance team’s operating layer” after running 30 win/loss interviews. New messaging shipped across the site, sales decks, and outbound within one quarter.
- Rebuilt the lifecycle email program around that positioning: six static campaigns became a behavior-triggered system in Braze that influenced $2.1M in new ARR within nine months (Braze-attributed, first-touch on activation).
- Built the launch process from scratch: three tiers, one owner per launch, a single brief as the source of truth. Ran 11 launches in 2025. Sales never learned about one from a customer.
- Wrote and maintained the competitive battlecards. Short enough to read mid-call, updated the week a competitor moved, retired when they went stale.
- Ran quarterly message testing with sales and support before anything shipped externally. The support team caught more bad copy than any agency we ever paid.
- Partnered with product on roadmap naming and packaging decisions, including talking them out of a tier called “Turbo.”

Growth Lead | Copper & Pine | Mar 2019 - Feb 2022

DTC home goods brand, seed through Series A | Oakland, CA

First marketing hire. Owned the brand’s voice, positioning, and retention program end to end.

- Shut off the entire paid social budget for 60 days to prove the brand could hold CAC on organic and email alone. It could. The board memo on why became the backbone of the Series A narrative.
- Wrote the positioning that carried the company from seed to Series A: kitchen goods for people who cook, not people who decorate. Every product page, email, and pitch deck followed from that sentence.
- Interviewed customers monthly and turned the notes into a messaging archive the founders quoted in board meetings.
- Lifted repeat purchase rate from 21% to 34% by rebuilding the post-purchase flow around product care and reordering rather than discounts.
- Launched the Hearth cast-iron line: named it, wrote the story, ran the waitlist. Sold out the first run in 11 days with zero paid support.

Strategist, promoted from Account Manager | Meridian West | Jun 2015 - Feb 2019

Mid-size independent marketing agency | San Francisco, CA

Started on accounts, moved to strategy in year two.

- Wrote messaging and channel strategy for eight retainer clients across consumer goods, hospitality, and B2B software.
- Ran positioning workshops for two client rebrands, including the discovery interviews, the competitive read, and the deck the CEO presented to the board.
- Rebuilt the agency’s client reporting template around outcomes instead of impressions. Adopted across every account within two quarters.
- Kept the two longest-tenured accounts in the building through an agency rebrand and three team turnovers.

SELECTED WORK

- The repositioning (Brightline Pay). 30 win/loss interviews, one uncomfortable readout, a new category story. Win rate against the largest competitor improved two quarters running.
- Lifecycle rebuild (Brightline Pay). Positioning is only real if the customer touchpoints carry it. Rebuilt every triggered email to match the new story. $2.1M ARR influenced in nine months (Braze-attributed, first-touch on activation), and sales started lifting lines from the emails into their outbound.
- The 60-day paid social kill (Copper & Pine). Proof that the brand, not the ad budget, was doing the work. The freed spend funded the email program behind the retention gains, and the write-up raised a Series A.

SKILLS

Craft: Positioning and messaging, launch management, win/loss programs, competitive intelligence, sales enablement, lifecycle marketing

Tools: Braze, Klaviyo, Segment, Amplitude, Looker, Notion, Figma (consumer of, not producer), working SQL

Practice: Customer interviews, message testing, cross-team launch coordination, writing that survives legal review

EDUCATION

San Francisco State University - BA, Communication Studies, 2014